THE WATCHES WERE GONE.

But How They Were Taken or by Whom

Is a Mystery. A mysterious robbery occurred Wednesday night in the house occupied by Alfred Monrote, a watch maker, at No. 108 D street northwest. A safe was opened and about $500 worth of gold watches taken therefrom. Mr. Monrote says that on Thursday morning he went to the establishment of Mr. Philip Wallach and got seventeen watches, which he took nome with him to repair. He placed them in his safe that night and in the morning they were gone. There was not the slightest indication of any one having entered the house. The doors and windows were found to be secured in the same manner as on the preceding evening. The safe had been opened by a key, and the lock was found to be in perfect condition, though there was out a slight covering of son, which had either been used in taking an impression or to divert suspicion from the actual means by which it was opened. When the robbery was discovered every corner was searched, and lying on the ashes in the sled in the rear of the house, together with the cigar box which had constituted the others, were found three of the warches. watch maker, at No. 308 D street northwest. A contained the others, were found three of the watches. Yesterfay afternoon the premises were visited by Mr. McDevitt and another private detective. Every nook was examined for some evidence of the burglars, together with the safe and its contents. The detectives said that the job was not done by professional thieves: that the house had not been entered; that the safe was opened by a key exactly similar to the one given them by Monrote, and that the job was done by some inmate of the house. There are in the house besides Mr. Monrole, his wife and two young som, and a workman, named thubler, who does not stay there at night. Betectives Block and Raff are working up the case.

Indicted for Murder He Must Again Go to Jail.

Louis Kareher, indicted for the murder of John W. Grimes on March 27 last, a homicide which grew out of the intimacy of the deceased with Kareher's wife, was arraigned in the criminal court yesterday and pleaded not guilty.

District Attorney Worthington stated that the accused was out on $1,000 bail. The grand jury accused was out on $1,000 bail. The grand jury had now indicted him for murder, and that was not a bailable offense. Judge Mackey, counsel for Karcher, said that the case was the same now as before, and that by indicting for murder the grand jury could not fix the grade of the crime.

Judge Wylle said that the case was somewhat different than before. If a man came home and found another man in his chamber with his wife homicide might follow, and yet it might not be san aggravating case either. When a man slew his wife's paramour in her chamber it was not an excussible case on its face, although it might not be murder. The jury had investigated the facts in the case and found an indictment for murder. That was not a bailable case, except under extraordinary circumstances, and the defendant would have to go to jail.

At the request of Judge Mackey, District Attorney Worthington promised him a trial at an early day. Karcher was turned over to the custody of the marshal and taken to jail.

A FREE BRIDGE.

The Senate and House to Discuss and Pass Upon the Question Monday.

The free bridge bill will come up for discussion Monday in both the senate and house. Senator Riddleberger in his speech yesterday favoring the bill said: "The people of Virginia are the only people in the United States who have to pay toll to get to the national capital." Mr. Ingalis favored the purchase of the Aqueduct bridge because it would be cheaper. Beside that consideration, it could be bought in thirty days. He wanted the bill recommitted to the committee for amendment. The bill went over until Monday. Referring to the free bridge question last night, Mr. Charles S. Moore said: "It is the sentiment of the entire public that the present bill should pass. As in the case of all other measures of public benefit that the people are interested in, the district commissioners are found opposing this project. There is not one citizen in every one hundred who opposes it. The Anusduct bridge not only discriminates against Virginia food producers, but it levies an annual tax on the government, because the bridge is used by government teams going to and coming from Fort Myer and the national cemetery at Arilington." Monday in both the senate and house. Senator

A Diamond Robbery.

Some time during the past week a sneak thief invaded the spartments of Admiral Nichols and and family, at the Ebbit house, and stole jewelry valued at nearly $1,500. The stolen jewelry was the property of Miss Nichols, and in the list of articles are given a diamond locket, diamond cross, diamond eavrings, topar ring, two toriolse rings, a pair of chased bracelets, and other small articles.

a pair of classed bracelets, and other small articles.

The case was placed in the hands of Detective Cartter, but up to last night he had obtained no good clew. There is an air of general mystery about the robbery which Admiral Nichol when called on, declined to clear up, stating that .e had good reasons to believe that if all the circumstances were made public the thief might escape.

From Money Not quite two years ago, for it was in the merry May of 1882—and a very merry month it was for ome people-a great company was brought out Its capital was £1,000,000 of which £500,000 was first issued; the neat little sum of £250,500 being payable on the allotment of shares. The company was started for certain not unambitious pur-poses. It proposed to supply, end to enable others to supply, the great and rapidly increasing de-mand for a vertain magnificent investion, having secured the license for its exclusive use for the poses. It proposed to supply, and to enable others to supply, the great and rapidly increasing demand for a certain magnificent invention, having secured the license for its exclusive use for the whole metropolis and suburbs comprised within the extensive and densely populated area known as the Metropolitan Postal district. This great area contained, besides the cities of London and Westminser, and the river Thames, 164 important parishes and districts, all duly set forth; but which, it must suffice to say, commenced with St. George's. Hanover Square, genity touched the Crystal Palace and the Victoria docks, and ended at remote Crouch End. One of the principal sources of profit was to be the granting of sublicenses for the use of the invention, which, having the destriable elements of being sure, brilliant, and healthful, would, it might safely be assumed, be in domand, not only in the private houses and churches, the hotels, and offices, and also the many thousand miles of roads and attents of the vast metropolis, with its population of upward of 4,000,000 souls. By its aid, too, manufactories were then, and were to be subsequently, kept at work all night. Central depots were to be astablished for the purpose of supplying all classes of customers, it having been proved that there was hardly any limitation of the various uses to which the invention could be applied.

The grand invention, the monopoly of which the company had secured, as set forth above, was further claimed to be "the best," not only on account of its brilliant qualities, but also because of its great economy. Such was its power that from one center it could be used over a vast district extending in circuits of many miles. It had further been proved by official statistics that its substitution for the articles in use would effect a saving to the government of more than 42½ per cent, of the existing expenditure. Furthermore, a perfect system was approaching competition, which would prevent who acted as go-between the intensity did the directors, the sod. News comes from Paris that La Force et la Lumiere, the Faure company, tostered by Philipart, which a few months since published a balance sheet ishowing assets in millions, has been decreed bankrupt. Another item of news from South America states that the attempt to light Rio de Janeiro by electricity (during which the shareholders in the gas company have been kept in suspense) has proved an utter failure. In short, the bossied effacement of gas and triumph of electricity has not come off. We do not say—that the latter light has not a future. We do not know that if a company were started in a modest way (say with a capital of £29,600, designing to work the best obtainable electric light on a low royally, with liberty to change for any better light that might be produced, and officered by honest men of business) it should not have our good word. But the days of the companies started with capitals of hundreds of thousands of pounds, and aims to efface gas and curich their shareholders, are numbered. There is nothing left for these concerns but to die and be buried, and remembering the attitude we have always taken, it is with some gratification that we give them a parting kick.

Very little change had taken place in the votes from the previous evening.
